BENEVOLENT FORCES WILL GATHER TONIGHT

TWO BIRMINGHAM OFFICERS ROUTED BY FOUR GUNMEN

Bandits Open Fire And Policemen Forced To Dash Away

DITCH PROVES SAFETY ZONE

Riot Squad Goes To the Scene, But Finds Nobody

(Associated Press)

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Feb. 11.—Two Birmingham police officers, Patrolman F. J. Harris and L. J. Worsham, were shot and slightly wounded early today when suddenly fired upon by gunmen in North Birmingham.

The officers, according to reports from four bandits when they were fired with a volley and finally tumbled, exhausted, into a creek a few hundred yards away. Officer Harris was shot in the middle finger of his right hand while Worsham received a flesh wound in the leg.

The officers declared that they were confronted suddenly by four men a short distance from the North Birmingham Trust and Savings bank in the heart of the business district and did not have an opportunity to draw their own pistols.

Two of the bandits were standing on one side of the street at the intersection of 27th street and 30th avenue North, while two others stood on the opposite side of 27th street and carried shotguns.

In the opinion of police the four men had planned to rob the bank but were prevented from carrying out their plans by the sudden appearance of the officers and the gunfire which followed.

Worsham and Harris told Chief H. McDuff they were walking north on 27th street and apparently did not notice two well-dressed men who were standing at the corner. When reaching them, however, they were suddenly ordered to throw their hands, they said, according to Chief McDuff. Both men had been covered with pistols. The officers said to have attempted to draw their pistols but as they did, other men standing on the opposite corner with shotguns, suddenly stepped out and prepared to fire on them.

Both officers plunged headlong into a ditch on 30th avenue midway between 27th and 28th streets, according to reports. The gunmen did not pursue the officers and when they finally struggled to their feet, all four left, it was said.

Chief McDuff Sergeant C. R. Rogers and a riot squad from headquarters were summoned and conducted a search of the neighborhood but found no one.

CUPID BUSY ALL OF 1925

Dan Cupid found plenty of activity in Morgan county in 1925. Annual report on marriage licenses, issued today by the probate court, revealed.

During the past year a total of 22 licenses were issued to Morgan county couples, the records showed. Of this total, licenses issued to white couples more than doubled the number issued to negroes, the figures being: Whites 6, negroes 136.

The year's activities of Cupid ranked well with the highest records ever known in Morgan county, it was indicated today by preliminary comparisons with previous years. A total of 23 licenses are issued in the first month of 1926, indicating another record for the year, January usually being considered quite a light month for matrimonial ventures. Figures on divorces for the county have not yet been tabulated but announcement probably will be made within a short time.

School Campus Scene Of Blast

Out-house Wrecked Near Main Building at Austinville; Citizens Are Aroused

Officers have not yet been able to determine the identity of the person or persons who, on Tuesday evening, are believed to have used a stick of dynamite or some other high explosive, to wreck an out-house on the Austinville school property.

Many citizens of the Austinville community were awakened between 10:30 and 11 o'clock Tuesday night by a blast which shook windows in residences over a wide area. Citizens, awakened from their sleep, investigated and later found that the sanitary toilet at the school had been wrecked. The out-house was about 50 yards from the school building itself.

The cause of the unusual explosion is still a mystery and officers declare they are unable to discover any motive or any reason for the act, unless the explosive was set as a prank by someone who did not stop to consider the potential seriousness of the blast.

The Austinville school building, now in course of completion, will be one of the handsomest in this section of the state, when work finally is finished, and the people of that section are very proud of their educational institution. They were reported much aroused by the explosion.

Eli Suggs Hurt In Auto Accident

A Moulton dispatch to The Daily today says little hope is held for the recovery of Eli Suggs, a young man residing about six miles east of Moulton, who was injured when he fell from a truck, which apparently he was trying to board, as the machine was in motion.

Earl Young, driver of the truck, is said to have warned Suggs the latter could not be taken aboard as the truck was loaded but in making the effort to climb aboard Suggs is said to have fallen striking his head on the paved road. Physicians hold out little hope for his recovery.

FROZEN BODIES OF TWO MEN FOUND

Officials Believe They Were Hanged Or Beaten To Death

(Associated Press)

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Feb. 11.—The frozen bodies of two men, bearing evidences of great violence, were found in an automobile a few miles from here today.

Officials expressed the opinion that the men either were hanged or beaten to death.

A finger on the hand of one man was mutilated, apparently indicating efforts had been made to remove a ring. No identification has been made. Police said they had found out the automobile had been left in the spot for 12 hours. Police are working on the theory that a liquor feud was responsible for the death of the men.

THIS BUILDING HOLDS CENTER OF STAGE AS DRIVE IS BEGUN

The above picture reveals the present Benevolent hospital building, the institution, the deeds of which, have made it one of the best known hospitals in the entire state. Serving, as it does, the counties of Morgan, Limestone, Lawrence and Cullman, it has the unique record of never having turned away a patient because of the financial inability of the patient to pay for hospital attention.

Founded on the foundation of service to humanity, and opened about 12 years ago, it has gradually enlarged its sphere of usefulness, until the time has arrived when more room and more equipment are imperative, if the expansion is to be continued.

Led by the Shriners of North Alabama, the public generally has become imbued with a determination that no longer shall the hospital be hampered because of lack of space and lack of equipment and lack of funds.

Today the campaign for $60,000 for the hospital gets underway and several hundred workers will begin a nine-day drive to obtain the goal.

JOINT MEETING OF CLUBS IS SUCCESS

Inspirational Address Is Delivered To Boys By Judge L. P. Troup

The joint meeting of the Decatur and Albany high "Y" clubs held at the Y. M. C. A. last night, was acclaimed a most enjoyable event by all members present. There were twenty-six students present beside the speaker, Judge L. P. Troup, C. J. Randolph, O. S. Hagerman and S. E. Arvidson.

Glenn McKelvey, Albany Hi-Y club president, presided over the affair with Mr. Hagerman in charge of the devotional service, and Mr. Arvidson as song leader.

Aside from a review of committee assignments of Hi-Y members to help put over the Older Boys' Conference due here February 19-20-21, it became known that Glenn McKelvey, along with Kiwanis President Arthur A. Jones will be expected to give the "welcome addresses" at the conference.

General Secretary C. J. Randolph of the Y. M. C. A. was given the floor, and in a short talk he outlined the entire program of the conference stressing the importance of the two clubs working in unison and diligence upon any and all conference assignments given them. Mr. Randolph stated that the local people are responding generously with reference to entertaining delegates from out of town.

Judge L. P. Troup gave the boys an inspirational address upon "The Ideals of Americanism." He drew several analogies of just how our American ideals are formed, one which likened our government building to the building of a home by an individual. A government is just what the people themselves make it. The judge pictured America as a "Storehouse of the World" both as to food and finances. He said Great Britain once thought that America would go under in an "inglorious failure," but added that this country is forging ahead under three important fundamentals of government namely truth liberty and justice.

The next meeting of the clubs will be a joint one, due to further plans for the conference, and it will be held at the Y. M. C. A. next Wednesday night at 7:00 p. m.

Orchestra Will Be Here On Friday

Leake's Orchestra of Atlanta will give an entertainment at Decatur high school Friday night at 8 o'clock under the auspices Students Association. An unusual variety of musical numbers will be rendered.

NINE-DAY CAMPAIGN STARTS AS OVER 400 ATTEND MASS MEET

Elaborate Program To Feature The Initial Ceremonies

VISITORS HERE FROM OUTSIDE

The Pledge System Is Outlined By Drive Heads

More than 400 workers, members of the executive committee and directing board, and visitors from neighboring North Alabama cities will meet tonight at 7:30 o'clock at the Decatur high school auditorium for the opening ceremonies of the Shriners' Drive for $60,000 for the enlarging and equipping of the Benevolent hospital adding facilities which will take care of hospital needs for this section for the next twenty years. An elaborate program featuring speakers and entertainers is being offered in this first general meeting of the entire hospital force.

Tonight the real launching of the greatest civic drive ever underway in the Twin Cities will be witnessed by hundreds of prominent citizens of Morgan, Lawrence, Limestone and Cullman counties. The first real activity of hospital workers will begin tonight after weeks of intensive preparation and hard work on the part of the directing board and the executive committee.

Prospect cards gleaned from the lists checked over on Tuesday by women and men workers, will be handed the workers tonight and the mustering of team forces will be brought to a close as captains start the nine day drive that is to bring into reality a long cherished dream of the cities, the Shrine organization of North Alabama, and those interested in the welfare of the hospital in being adequately equipped to fit the needs of all classes in the emergency.

The pledging idea adopted for the campaign is believed to be a wise move by leaders, providing as it does a means for every man and woman to contribute a share in this county wide campaign. The original pledge is not necessarily paid at the time the pledge is made. The payments are placed on a basis of five 20 per cent payments or in 12 monthly payments. This plan, leaders believe, will work no hardship on any contributor, taking care of all classes and making the matter of pledging from $50 to $100 thought to be the general subscription basis a comparatively financial ease for citizens in every walk of life. First installments of the pledge are due on or before March 1, 1926. The last is due March 1, 1926. The last is due March 1, 1926.

"What else would you have?" he wanted to know. "We have no wars to fight and no work to do. There is nothing left but pastime. People used to write poems and read Shakespeare. Rotten time they had of it. Today we invent pleasures to be built upon by our senses. That's more reasonable and it involves a learned knowledge of who belongs to who and what's the chances of taking her away from him? But we were talking of this architect fellow. Tell me about him, please. Seems to enjoy working at something."

"You'll have to satisfy my own curiosity first," Joanna declared. "Perhaps you'll send for the 'esteemed journal' I'd like to know what is being said of him. He was a very struggling student when I saw him last."

An attendant quickly produced a copy of L'Echo which bore that morning's date. Michael pointed to a paragraph in the column of the new arrivals at the various resorts along the fashionable coast. Both Kenilworth and Yvonne watched her furtively, when, with a murmured "Pardon!" she fastened her eyes on the short item.

"Among the bookings on the Blue Express at Calais yesterday was the distinguished young American architect, John Wilmore, who comes from a visit to London for an indefinite stay. He has made reservations at the Las Palmiers. Mr. Wilmore's recent achievement of fame has been extremely interesting. It is understood that a year or so ago he was unknown. American capitalists suddenly appreciated the great merits of his daring conception of a war memorial in which are included some startling conventional features which have caused international discussion among artists and scholars generally. It is believed his work will be a valuable contribution not only to America but to society and the world in general."

The paragraph explained the knowledge of the others that John was coming; that he had arrived for the Blue Express came in with the morning. But it did not explain why he had not notified her. Something about it all quivered at her lips, briefly.

"Extraordinary," Kenilworth remarked when she put the paper aside, "how a chap with nothing but a dream can suddenly stumble upon recognition and success. We all remember Mr. Wilmore in New York. If I remember, Miss Manners took occasion to be provoked with him."

"Then it was more than an acquaintance," Prince Michael declared. "One is never provoked with an acquaintance. We won't intrude upon that aspect, Made-moiselle," he added, to Joanna. "As you will probably present him, I'd like to know how he got on so well."

"I'm afraid I can't tell you much more than people generally know," she replied. "It came about after I left America with Yvonne. I ran away, you know, because no one I knew there had any confidence in me."

Prince Michael detected a seriousness of some repressed plaint, and thought it needed observance. He sought her hand, and would have put his over it, oblivious to the others at the table. Joanna brought her hand away. Quietly, she went on:

"Before then we had been quite good friends. I remember he had some plan for a memorial, something he wanted some day to build. I was never interested, much, because it wasn't anything I could understand, or wanted. I remember, though, he objected to its being called a 'war' memorial. It was to be something commemorating soldiers themselves. All kind of soldiers, I think—not only our own, but of other countries as well. Somehow he's made it known about, I suppose. Now when you have a mind to talk to him about it, you will know almost as much as I do."

"Morbid idea, though," the prince observed. "I can't imagine anything I'd run away from quicker than a reminder of that sort. Sentimental though, I suppose they'll always be doing things of the kind."

"The striking feature of his conception," Yvonne remarked, "seems to be his offering of a woman, a young woman, as the feature inspiration of all soldiers and putting her, instead of the customary fighting figure on his highest pedestal. Others have given tribute to the fighter himself. He proposes a monumental structure which shall draw attention to what soldiers fight for." Of Joanna she asked: "Isn't that the idea?"

"Yes," Joanna agreed. "That wasn't his original plan, but he seems to have adopted it. It's what has caught on. I've read that he contends that it is always a girl that soldiers fight for. They've always left a girl of some kind at home, one like me, perhaps, or the one they're married to—at least a mother. And mothers and wives were girls in their day. John has explained that he doesn't think girls change like fashions do. To soldiers who leave them to go to fight for them, they have always been quite the same reliable and worthwhile. It's a quaint sort of an idea, but I suppose it must be a good one."

Yvonne had shot a sudden glance at Joanna, and kept her eyes on her, intently, until she finished. "I remember correctly," she observed. "He did not always have the opinion that women can't change."

Joanna nodded at her. "Yes, I've been wondering if he's altered his theories, or just altered his scheme to make it pay."

"At any rate," Kenilworth remarked, "he is in a fair way to see his project materialize. It's coming internationalized and there is talk already of dedicating the idea in other countries. The generation will go any length to draw a lesson or as undisturb-

"En plein," she called again, and swept her 45,000 francs—23,000—onto the table.

ing memory out of the man, upheaval."

Yvonne decided they had given enough of the tea hour to the merits of John's bid for popular fame. She had observed that Kenilworth, while he gave his part to the discussion, was uneasy. He had studied Joanna's face constantly, and watched every changing light in her eyes and line about her lips. She proposed a turn about the Casino rooms. "We shall have time for an hour of play in treatise et quar ante hall," Prince Michael appropriated her at once, "much to Joanna's satisfaction, and led the way along the avenue of poplars through the Casino gardens to the white terrace."

Kenilworth, lagging behind with Joanna, went directly to the subject that concerned him deeply. "You are not going to let his turning up interfere with things, are you?" he asked.

"So far as I can remember," Joanna returned, "he has never interfered much with me. Used to want to, of course, but couldn't then. I could hardly fancy him being much of an instance now."

"Have you, then, completely wiped him out? As you seemed to imply that night when you invited me to join you in a kiss?"

She laughed. "That was so many ages ago, Roddy! I'd lost track of that one."

"That is evading the question," he rebuked her.

"John wouldn't have me then," she said simply. "What I thought he was the one thing in all the world I wanted to buy with my money. I doubt if he'd want me at all now. He's famous, you see, and well on the road to prosperity. He won't need to take chances. I'm not as good a bet for him now as I was then. Am I, Roddy?"

She was glaring him with her smile. There was no coquettishness in it at all, just frank, open provocation.

"Do you know," he exclaimed, irritably, "you are the most unfathomable creature within my experience?"

She was silent until they came up to the terrace steps. She answered him then as if there had been no lapse of time. "No, I'm not. I was thoroughly fathomed this morning. A man told me he wanted me however and whatever I am. If I could say just what I'd like to say about that, I'd say that would be a damn safe bargain for a man to make with any girl. But I can't say that, of course, for I must be a hypocrite and let on that I never swear."

CHAPTER XXV

When Joanna Gambles

Kenilworth would have guided his companion around the big Casino building to the pigeon field which lies between it and the sea, but Joanna preferred to go onto the white terrace and into the gambling rooms.

In Roddy's manner there was every sign of the truth of Yvonne's observation in the Trianon summer house at Amette; that he was worried by the reappearance of John in the girl's schemes of things. Secretly she was disturbed by him. During the months in New York, before her departure for London and France, he had begun a sumerious admirer, graceful in his devotions, impressing her as a man of the world who had decided to affect enthusiasm over a new toy. Then, suddenly, his attitude and his purpose had altered.

He had deliberately followed her and Yvonne to London. It was then that circle of men and women which revolved about men of his kind, young men who are old enough to be discreet and rich enough to be idle, began to take stock of the seriousness of Roddy Kenilworth in his pursuit of the young American millionaire, Joanna Manners. There was a great deal of bond of grief over this state of affairs, for Kenilworth was known as one who went from one affair to another at slight provocation, but always magnificently generously. It was felt that if he were definitely lost to his world of sub rosa romance it would be disastrous.

It was generally wished that the young American, whose fresh youth had proved an irresistible charm, whose charmed life in heretofore of flash, would succumb to the inevitable—or, to Roddy's determination—and in the usual course, free him for his next feminine engagement. "For," said one young woman to her dancing partner at the fashionable Embassy Club, "Roddy looks as though he were going to be serious, this time; he hasn't had a serious affair since the early days of Yvonne Constant. He won't be a free agent until he gets over this attack, and the American is delaying matters."

Joanna liked Roddy Kenilworth. She had heard, as people do hear, that Yvonne had been of his making. How much to believe and what to discount she didn't know, nor care. She gloried in her ability, she who had come out from behind the silk counter, to bring the green into his eyes whenever she was of his whim to make him take note of her. She knew Roddy was in a continual fight with himself over her. Dominister was always her slave. Brandon served her whenever she asked, but he remained aloof; she couldn't sway him—or, rather, she wouldn't dare. But Roddy made an occasional effort to baffle the spell of her, and to thwart him was like quaffing champagne.

But, just now, with Prince Michael's sudden surrender to her creating a new undertone, and with the coming of John to irritate him, she was restless beneath Kenilworth's intent appraisals. And she didn't want to be cross ex-aminated about John. She hoped she was concealing from Roddy the constant searching of her eyes along the vistas of the Terrace and into the Casino Square which fronts the crowded tables of the Cafe de Paris, for a familiar figure.

In the atrium, the red and gold hung foyer of the Casino, Yvonne and Michael were awaiting them.

"The Rooms are crowded," Yvonne observed. "I've decided to hunt a place at the roulette tables."

Around each of the tables were crowds four or five deep—the late afternoon company of curious visitors to the world's gayest shrine of sin, tourists, cocottes seeking monsieurs for the evening, and old women lingers-on holding chairs with the hope of selling them to after-dinner habitués. All of these last, the old women of the gambling rooms, knew each one of the party that crossed the wide polished floor of the splendidly decorated rooms and glanced about for places. Croupiers, too, gave little signs to each other at the entrance of the sleek Yvonne and the lovely young American. Both had been the heroines of sensational plays that had become Casino legends. Yvonne dropped into a chair. Michael brought from an old bag for a fifty franc note. Kenilworth guided Joanna to another and won a curtsey from the ancient dame who surrendered it by the size of his tip. Joanna plunged immediately into her play, Kenilworth standing close behind her.

When Joanna gambled she lost herself entirely. The color came into her cheeks as the rouge et noir, the red and black, divided its favors.

Others played with gold louis, or ten franc notes, counting their plaques nervously after each turn of the wheel. Joanna tossed thousand franc notes onto her colors or numbers or columns with feverish excitement. When she lost, and the croupier's wooden rake drew her stake away from her, she made pretty grimaces. When she won, and the rake pushed toward her fingers its pile of gold and silver and notes, she clapped her hands and turned to smile up at the man who stood over her. On this afternoon she made her first plays listlessly, as if her enthusiasm had been left with the hats of the men in the Atrium; but with one or two windings she had forgotten everything, seemingly, but the cry of the croupiers and the spinning of the wheel.

Brandon, strolling through the Rooms as was his daily afternoon custom, came upon them. He pushed his way among the spectators who always gathered about the Golden Girl when rumor spread through the rooms that she was playing, and stood with Kenilworth, Joanna, conscious of his presence, lifted her ungloved fingers over her shoulder for him to touch them. Kenilworth observed to the newcomer: "She's in a reckless mood, but she's winning!"

12 Years Ago From the Daily of TODAY February 11, 1914Plans are being made by local friends to name a committee to work for the election of Hon. W. W.
Callahan to congress.Mrs. H. Gill will leave Thursday for Huntsville to be the guest of relatives.Brock Irwin, of Hillsboro, is the guest of Mrs.
S. D. Brock.C. E. Malone is expected to return Saturday from Mobile.Mrs. E. H. Allison was hostess to the Progressive Culture club at its regular meeting Tuesday afternoon.Some say gross business tells the story of progress, but it had rather rely on the deposit slip.We wonder if the respect of the Birmingham attorney for the supreme court has been increased by his jail sentence for contempt.A total of $75,000,000 is sought to purchase coal. We say it was costly, but never dreamed that we would be led for any such amount at the first of the month.The proposed baking merger is halted by publicity.
Under what kind of attitude the government would talk, it became known the growers of wheat had been organized in one vast association, pledged to keep prices up.Movie actors and actresses have a quaint way of entering life. Upon the death of a famous star recently, newspapers said that her fourth husband mourned her.
Alma Reubens and Ricardo Cortez are married, it her third, his first. Truly variety must be the ideal of stars.Some of the problems of life we have with us always.
Twelve years ago, the Commercial Appeal, commenting on an attack by Prof. William Howard Taft on indecent books and plays, urged parents to be more careful of the kind of literature their children read. The Commercial Appeal hits at both the "modern" play and the "modern"
vel, declaring:
"To discard modesty on the plea of enlightenment is a poor explanation on the part of the novelist and equally poor policy. Let the overdiscussed sex problem adjust itself. The erring woman is a familiar figure. Christ and the Magdalen the error of her ways. He pointed out a way to be saved. The great lesson of Biblical days plies today as well. Society does not need these modern exponents to improve upon the teachings of Jesus Christ." The plea of the Commercial-Appeal is just as applicable today as it was twelve years ago.DECLAIM OF MILITARY HERO ABSENT IN THE CASE OF GENERAL J. PERSHING.Whether because of conditions, different now from at they were in years when America fought before, or because the present-day military heroes lack something which made heroes of other days public idols, the fact remains that General John J. Pershing, commander in chief of the American Expeditionary Force, does not occupy the place in the public imagination, nor receive the claim, accorded leaders in other wars.
General Pershing recently has been in Africa, Chile, as ad of the boundary commission, but came home because of his health. The day he reached American shores, newspapers carried modest announcements of his return. The day after, he was relegated to the inside pages and there he has remained.The usual pomp marking the welcome of returning heroes was largely lacking. Some people gathered at the dock and cheered the A. E. F. commander as he set out on the ship that brought him home, but what a pitifulshow compared with the welcomes accorded heroes of other days. General Pershing is ill, but his condition has failed to awaken any great degree of sympathy in the heart of America. Even the soldiers who served under Pershing abroad are far from being hero worshippers.
The military hero is a bit out of date.DO THE MOVIES HAVE A TENDENCY TO INCREASE CRIME? WARDEN DECLARES NO!The war having played out as an excuse for the continuation of the crime wave, and many persons, unable to explain its existence by prohibition, fall back upon the movies as the reason for increasing lawlessness.But do the movies have a tendency to increase crime?
Dr. George W. Kirchwey, former warden of Sing Sing prison and now head of the department of criminology of the New York School of Social Work, says "no," and rather emphatically."In my ten years experience in dealing with the criminal, I have never heard of an authentic case of any person who committed a crime because of the influence of a motion picture," he asserts. "In so far as motion pictures have any direct effect, they do not encourage crime, they discourage it."That is fairly strong language and Dr. Kirchwey being in a much better position to judge than most of us are,
is an extraordinary tribute to the moving picture industry.
Many will not agree with his conclusions, but it must not be forgotten that he is speaking as an authority on crime, while most of his critics have hearsay and their own opinions as their only basis for conclusions.Dr. Kirchwey, explaining his declaration that the influence of the movies has been more of a deterrent to law violators than an inspiration, points out that the movies over and over again repeat the warning "you can't get away with it."There are many contributing causes to crime, the criminologist believes, enumerating some of them as follows:The sensational character of many crimes during the last few years which some people attribute to the suggestion of the movie is due not to the movie but to the automobile, which has furnished a new way of making a quick get away to the bandit. This has imparted a spectacular quality to crimes of this character.But it is not only crime that has become sensational. The invention of the automobile, the radio, the motion picture and our dazzling prosperity have brought the luxury of travel and dancing and golf and a hundred other amusements into the lives of persons who fifteen or twenty years ago would have lived a dull, drab, narrow existence.A new invention, which transforms the ways of living of multitudes of our people must be judged by its total results. Just as the good qualities of the automobile vastly outweigh its potentialities for evil so do the constructive and educational influences of the motion picture overbalance any bad influence it might have.It seems to me, absurd to say that the movie exerts a demoralizing effect on the minds or characters of those who patronize that form of entertainment.
There may in the multitude of movie patrons be a few who overdo it or who are so unstable that they get harm from excessive indulgence, to whom it becomes a form of dissipation. But I don't see any way in which the world can be made safe for morons.For the vast majority I believe that the mind is broadened and stimulated and educated by motion pictures as they are today.Motion picture entertainment is used regularly in many prisons, hospitals, institutions for the feeble-minded and orphan asylums for just the same purpose that it serves for the general public—to furnish an outlet for the craving for adventure and for allowing the mind to relax.Motion picture entertainment is a great boon to all such institutions and a real means of reducing infractions of the rules. Hospitals find that motion pictures have a tonic effect upon the inmates, stimulating them, preventing them from brooding and putting them in a mental condition that is helpful in restoring health.Americans are the most progressive of people, the hardest working, the hardest playing, the most inventive, the broadest in vision and quickest to adapt to their own uses any new idea. It is good that we are so and to that state, by stimulating imagination, by broadening the perspective, by furnishing an outlet for the spirit of adventure, by bringing the whole world before the eyes of the lowliest amusement seeker in the smallest village, the motion picture plays a very important part. The motion picture registers impressions vividly and lastingly, the good with the bad, and since it furnishes a thousand times more good suggestions than evil ones there can be no doubt as to its value to the community.In attempting to shift the blame for crime from the movies to other agencies, again Dr. Kirchwey will find many in disagreement with him.Yet, having seen the moving picture industry grow within a few years from practically nothing to one of the largest industries of the nation, the public generally is glad that the charge that the movies contribute to moral and legal delinquencies falls flat, when exposed to the keen analysis of the criminal expert.The growth of the moving picture business has been so rapid it has suffered many of the experiences of a boom town. It has picked up much that is not entirely wholesome. These things are being weeded out and the time may not be far off when the pictures will be all that they should be.The movies, touching as they do, virtually every class in America, have an opportunity to become an influential agency for good or evil, and The Daily is glad that at least one noted criminologist can answer that this influence has not been for evil.TODAY

this country but don't gamble. That always ends badly.LLOYD GEORGE says. "The world is losing its ideals, liberalism throughout the whole world has fallen on evil days."In Italy he saw newspapers thrown out of office by force, but says he, the Italian people like it and prosper under it."Italy is prospering, mills and factories are throbbing with life, new works are springing up everywhere, old industries are reviving."THE world has often seemed "to lose its ideals," when it has only mislead them, temporarily. A respectable gentleman in a rough and tumble fight, rolling into the gutter, loses his dignity as he straightens
out his collar, necktie, etc.

But he is alright after awhile.

The nations of Europe have been rolling in the gutter, cutting each others throats, now a reversion to tourism and dictatorship is the order of the day.Nations and individuals all return gradually to old ways of thinking, and living.MUSSOLINI, shaking his fist at Germany, tells the Italian parliament, "We are not afraid and won't budge an inch from our policy."This threat refers to trouble about the Brenner pass in the tyrol.
Mussolini says Italy's flag shall stay there and if necessary he will carry it forward into German territory.Italy's deputies, delighted, greeted Mussolini with thunders of applause and "long live the duke."THAT'S Germany's business and Italy's, not ours. But it may become our business, now that we are in the world court.European nations want peace as we do, and hope to maintain it.
But any one of them is ready to go to war under certain conditions.
War questions would go before the world court. We are in the court, and shall not know until the time comes what may be expected of us.YOU MAY SAY "we are not compelled to do anything. That's true, perhaps, but we may reach a decision that will offend Europe. Then Europeans could and probably would say: "In view of this disloyal action by the United States, we decline to pay our debts."Give Europe an excuse, or what she would consider good reason for such a statement, and see what happens.Approximately 800 persons paid poll tax in Coosa county this year, it has been estimated.ATTENTION, JR. O. U. T. M.All members of Winona Council, No.

Treat Colds 2 Ways

With ONE Treatment

WHEN rubbed over throat and chest for all kinds of cold troubles Vicks VapoRub does two things at once:

- (1) Its ingredients are vaporized by the body heat and inhaled direct to the inflamed air passages, loosening the phlegm and easing the difficult breathing, and
- (2) At the same time it warms and stimulates the skin like an old-fashioned poultice, "drawing out" the soreness and pain and thus aiding the vapors inhaled to break up the congestion.

This double action of Vicks usually relieves the most stubborn cold over night.

HOW LIFE'S SPAN MAY BE LENGTHENED

Heredity and Environment Affect Health, but Use of Hygienic Knowledge, Mixed with Common Sense, Add to One's Years.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

United States Senator from New York.

Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

LENGTH of life is determined to some extent by what we call "the law of chance." A given number of persons, born on the same day and living practically identical lives, will die on dates wide apart. There are so many accidental factors in every career that nobody can prophesy accurately as to the length of a given life.

There are some general principles, however, which have an important bearing upon longevity. The observance of a certain rules of living are likely to make the members of one family live longer than the members of another family.

In this connection, I want to mention a family which in my mind has had the most remarkable record in history. If there is a parallel case I shall be glad to be told about it.

One of my colleagues in the Congress is the son of parents still living. The father is eighty-six and the mother, seventy-nine. This couple have nine living children, all sons. There are fifty-five living grandchildren.

All this may not be remarkable, but what do you think of the following statement? There has never been a grave opened for this family! Not a single death has occurred among them for three generations.

Something more than chance determines these circumstances. I venture to say there was a good cook in the background of the family. Somebody taught the value of fresh air, sunlight and exercise. That valuable information was handed down from parents to sons. The latter selected wives who held similar ideas.

Of course, a family which transmits a strong, vigorous body confers an advantage over the weak and frail structure which is the common heritage of another family. No one of the weak type need be discouraged by this fact. A little more care than the stronger person needs and exercise will make it possible for the frail person to live out a life fully equal in deeds and years to the other.

Heredity and early environment are important, of course, but they are not all determining by any means. I have told you of a friend of mine who retired from business at thirty-six because of chronic ill-health. He lived to be eighty-six. The exercise of common sense in his physical life gave him a long career in spite of the bad beginning.

You may think God if you are well born in a physical sense, but even if you have not this advantage you may live to be a hundred.

Freshmen will find that liniment applied to the head will make them smart.

Brown—"Do you think the dead can communicate with us?"

Black—"I know they can't. Once I managed to borrow a dollar from a Scotchman. A week later he died, and I haven't heard a word since."

"But why," asked the city friend of the suburban dweller, "do you allow your little boy to play in the mud?"

"Well, you see," said the suburbanite, "we're getting him used to dirt. We're going to make a city politician of him."

The world will be overcome by a monstrous flood of sin, said the preacher. Dam it.

TREAT GOITRE AT HOME

Operation Prevented by Alabama Lady

Mrs. C. H. Padgett, 629 Quintard St., Anniston, Ala., says: "You have my permission to use my testimonial. I hope every one suffering with Goitre will see it. My Goitre was of twelve years growth, and caused terrible distress. I will write to any one about my experience with Sorbol-Quadruple a colorless liniment." Sold at all drug stores, or write Sorbol Company, Mechanicsburg, Ohio. Locally at Dillehay Bros., druggists.

BILIOUS ATTACKS

From Which Kentucky Man Suffered Two or Three Times a Month, Relieved by Black-Draught.

Lawrenceburg, Ky.—Mr. J. P. Neyens, a local coal dealer and farmer, about two years ago learned of the value of Thedford's Black-Draught liver medicine, and now he says:

"Until then I suffered with severe bilious attacks that came on two or three times each month. I would get nauseated. I would have distress and couldn't work."

"I would take pills until I was worn-out with them. I didn't seem to get relief. After taking the pills my bowels would act a couple of three times, then I would be very constipated."

"A neighbor told me of Black-Draught and I began its use. I never have found so much relief as it gave me. I would not be without it for anything."

"It seemed to cleanse my whole system and make me feel like new. I would take a few doses—get rid of the bile and have my usual clear head, feel full of 'pep' and could do twice the work."

One cent a dose.

HARRIS EXPLAINS BOY SCOUTS WORK

Kiwanians Hear Leader Of District Tell Of Organization

Stanley Harris of Chattanooga regional official of the Boy Scouts of America, addressed the local Kiwanis club at noon Thursday, explaining in detail the work of that organization. Mr. Harris who has been in Scout work for the past 16 years made a splendid impression on his hearers explaining much to the Kiwanians in regard to Scouting.

He told also of the rapid progress being made in the Tennessee Valley since the organization of the Valley Council sometime ago, and expressed the hope that the growth of Scouting would be continued in this section.

Miss Annie Wheeler and Mrs. Vera Austelle also were guests of the Kiwanis club at their meeting today.

Doctor: "Yes, gentlemen, I have sold these pills for 25 years, and never had a complaint. Now what does that prove?"

Voice in the crowd: "That dead men tell no tales."

Future Career of Local Football Star Causes Plenty of Speculation

Floyd Tuck, captain of the football machine at Morgan school this year, and former captain of Albany high's purple and gold outfit, finishes prepping at Morgan this year and, in due course of events, will attempt to weld a cleated hoof in behalf of some institution of higher learning.

Just where Tuck will matriculate seems to be as indefinite as the age of Ann. Vanderbilt followers insist that Tuck is going to be found under the freshman colors of the Nashville school next fall. Alabama followers contend he will wear a crimson and white jersey and so it goes, Birmingham-Southern, Auburn and two or three other colleges claiming a line on Tuck's future services.

In the meantime Tuck is pursuing the usual even tenor of his ways and saying little.

Possibility of Albany and Decatur getting into professional baseball again loomed today, with representatives of local civic organizations feeling out local sentiment in regard to obtaining a franchise in the Tri State league which is headed by John D. Local people have been informed that the eight club circuit has been made up with the exception of one vacancy inasmuch as the Tri Cities have obtained a place in the loop it was considered desirable to have Albany-

YOU'LL say so when you discover what a perfect peach of a home-rolled cigarette P. A. makes. Pull up a chair and pull down your vest and get an earful of this sweet music about a better cigarette tobacco. We're talking about Prince Albert, you bet.

First off, P. A. rolls easier. It's crimp-cut and stays put. All of it goes into the papers . . . every fragrant, nut-brown grain . . . not into your lap or all over the floor. It burns better for the same reason. Doesn't go out as soon as you lay it down.

And you won't lay it down often when you discover that wonderful taste of real tobacco. Cool. Fragrant. Friendly. The Prince Albert process cuts out bite and parch pos-i-tive-ly. Get a tidy red tin or a toppy red bag today and you've got the best there is for cigarettes.

This goes for pipes too. If you've envied the fellows who have found pipe-contentment, just see what a wonderful difference P. A. makes in the bowl of a jimmy-pipe. Pipe or cigarette, your tobacco troubles are over when you sign up with Prince Albert.

PRINCE ALBERT

—no other tobacco is like it!

P. A. is sold everywhere in tidy red tins and toppy red bags. And always with every bit of bite and parch removed by the Prince Albert process.
